

"Modern homes today are generally all about suiting peoples' family and busy lifestyles, and enhancing enjoyment during their precious down time," says Tony. "Our home is all about our lifestyle, as we have children and run a business, but we also love entertaining. The superior Siemens cooking appliances combined with a versatile and spacious kitchen are a testament to this. The alfresco kitchen and main kitchen area are both low maintenance with their Corian seamless benches and splashbacks. Storage is another big factor for most home owners. No space has been wasted in this home and the abundance of storage cupboards means that everything has a place. Even the stairwell has been cleverly hidden behind clad doors that conveniently pop open when pressed to reveal huge storage areas."

One-metre by one-metre floor tiles on the lower level result in a seamless floor that enhances the concept of spaciousness. Bifold doors and a bifold window that combine to open the whole entertainment area up further create large open versatile spaces. The travertine cladding from Zuccari makes a huge impact on the feel of the whole house as it has been used internally and externally. The rich colours and textures add warmth to the home which can only be achieved with natural products. The 1m x by 1m floor tiles are stunning and help to create very clean lines; Tony wanted these simple, clean lines and one of his goals was to make sure that finishes were as low maintenance as possible for the busy couple – given his wife Audrey also works with him at Vestra. "After all, people want to live in their homes and enjoy them without having to spend endless hours cleaning and maintaining them," says Tony. Marri timber floorboards have been used on the second floor and the combination of colour and warmth is a feature in itself.

The ceiling in the alfresco is made from flat LED panels that are an amazing feature at night. These LED panels are low in cost to run while providing their light. Tony wanted something different that
